Medical Informatics
Training Program
at the Lister Hill
National Center for Biomedical Communications

The Lister Hill National Center for Biomedical Communications (LHNCBC) is a division of the National Library of Medicine which is one of the National Institutes of Health, Department of Health and Human Services, the government's primary agency for support and conduct of biomedical research. LHNCBC provides opportunities for postdoctoral fellows, graduate and medical students, college students, and visiting faculty to participate in collaborative research in a variety of areas of medical informatics.

Research activities involve both basic and applied informatics in several broad research areas. Knowledge-based research focuses on language and information processing, and expert systems. Information systems research includes consumer health informatics, database systems, digital library research, and medical education systems. Image-processing research includes image segmentation, compression, and transmission methods and algorithms. The Center is also the focal point for the NLM's high performance computing activities, including research support for telemedicine and health applications of the Next Generation Internet.

Postdoctoral candidates should have a Ph.D., M.D. or equivalent degree with a background in research and training in medical informatics, computer science or engineering. Stipends for postdoctoral fellows begin at $46,469. This is an equal opportunity program open to all qualified persons without regard to race, sex, sexual orientation, religion, age, color, disability or national origin. More details can be seen at our Web site at <http://lhncbc.nlm.nih.gov>. Send applications and inquiries to May Cheh; National Library of Medicine, 8600 Rockville Pike, Mail Stop 54, Bethesda, MD 20894-6075; Email: chch@nlm.nih.gov

MIT

FACULTY POSITION AEROSPACE AUTOMATION

Candidates are sought with experience and research interest in aerospace automation for a faculty position in the Department of Aeronautics and Astronautics at MIT. The position is available as of September 2003. Candidates must have a Ph.D., a strong interest in aerospace automation and decision aiding based on A.I. and/or control theory for domains such as aerospace robotics, automated reasoning, learning and reasoning under uncertainty, decision support tools and flight automation.

MIT encourages women and underrepresented minorities to apply. Application must include two copies of the following: a cover letter, a 2-5 page statement of research and teaching interests and c.v. with the names and addresses of at least three individuals who will provide letters of recommendation. Forward applications by January 15, 2003 to: Professor Edward F. Crawley, Head, MIT Department of Aeronautics and Astronautics, Room 33-207, 77 Massachusetts Avenue, Cambridge, MA 02139-4307; or by electronic mail to aa-fac@mit.edu (MS Word or plain text).
